Dear Klaus:

I have just returned from an extended trip to Washington. I understand that my secretary informed your office at Project FORECAST that I would not be available during your visit to Los Angeles; she tells me that your letter arrived too late to be answered by mail. I am very sorry that we missed connections, and if you should be coming out again to advise FORECAST, I would look forward to talking with you. Otherwise, I hope we shall meet before too long in the East.

Incidentally, I have just had occasion to reread your symposium, NATO and American Security, and I congratulate you on the fact that large parts of it still read extremely well, with all that has happened since. That really remains a most valuable piece of work.

Yours,
